The Synthesis of Research on People's Participation in Upper Northern Provincial Cluster 1: A Systematic Review

Dr. Akarawin Sasanapitak[1*], Sasipong komolwanit[2]

Abstract

This article has aim to research synthesis of people's participation in Upper Northern Provincial Cluster 1 that consist of Chiang Mai, Mae Hon Son, Lampang and, Lamphun. Using a systematic review process, Studies published between 2007- 2018 were searched from Thai library integrated system (Thailis). The findings showed that there were 93 studies which have synthesized the following issues: (1) Most researcher's gender is male (54.8%), (2) Most advisors have an academic position as associate professor (48.4%), (3) Most researcher's institute is Chiang Mai University (45.2%), (4) The most successful year of research is 2011 (24.7), (6) Most research characteristics is term paper (76.3%), (7) Most of the unit of research analyzes are at the community level (94.6%), (8) The research objectives emphasize to study the state of people's participation, (9) Most participation's issue is related to local government organization (31.2%), (10) Most people participation dimension is concerned to planning participation (11) Simple sampling techniques mostly has been used in research (67.7%), (12) Most of the samples were sized between 301 – 400 sample (57.0 %), (13) Most of the data collection periods don't specify the collection periods (69.9%), (14) All researches used descriptive statistics and a few of them use inferential statistics and, (15) Most questionnaire testing are performed by experts.

Keywords: People's Participation, Systematic Review, Upper Northern Provincial Cluster, Thailand

---

[1] Lecturer of Local Government Department, Faculty of Humanities and Social Science, Phranakon Si Ayutthaya Rajabhat University, Phranakon Si Ayutthaya, 13000

[2] Student of Local Government Department, Faculty of Humanities and Social Science, Phranakon Si Ayutthaya Rajabhat University, Phranakon Si Ayutthaya, 13000

* Corresponding author, E-mail: akarawins@gmail.com